'A year worth thinking about.'

It was an odd thing to do, in a way ... to sit there, feet dragging on the ground as he swayed very gently on the old weathered swing, letting it squeak, squeak, squeak to an almost stop. Most of his friends had already left for the beach, and those who stayed behind had headed up the road. But he sat there, swinging, alone, not lonely, thinking back over the year. It was a year sandwiched somewhere, he thought, between the popsicles of yesterday and pay checks of tomorrow. Call it a year of growing pains. Not a bad year. Mostly a good one, he decided, as he sat there, swinging slowly.

'Mostly, it had changed.'

There was something scary about the first day of school, he remembered, rounding the bend to a good old new Fleming. Old because it looked mostly the same, with its sprawling campus blocked in on two sides by new apartment buildings and on the other two by another school and a golf course. New because mostly it had changed, with a whole schoolful of kids coming over from Addison. New because the first bell rang an hour later, at least for sophomores, and the last bell blasted too close to suppertime for comfort. New because the two schools would share club officers and blue and gold uniforms and classrooms packed sardine-style and prom and even graduation.

He thought about the kids from Addison. They'd vowed to stick together, but he couldn't help but wonder if they hadn't felt a little lost that first day. For them, nothing about the school would seem familiar, except, perhaps, a sense of rivalry. He remembered thinking thoughts like that as he skirted the corner of Hershberger Road and came to a stop in the 3600 block. The not an inch to spare parking lot proved it: good old new Fleming was facing growing pains.

The swing swayed slower and slower-letting the cat die, they used to call it. The toe of his well-worn tennis shoe carved a trail in the dirt beneath. It had been a year, he thought, when a country had seemed a little too big for its britches, and a series of crisis whittled it down to size.

A year when every American was entitled to life and liberty, but not to a full tank of gas. A year when nobody at all would have wanted to change places with the men in the White House. A year when a tornado made shambles of Williamson Road, and people began to realize just how beautiful a three-bedroom brick ranch could be. A year when David Brinkley said "Goodnight Chet" one last time, when North Carolina State left U.C.L.A. in tears. A year when not even Jim Croce's songs went on forever.

The June breeze ruffled the cuffs of his blue jeans and whistled around the ropes that fastened the swing to the old Maple tree. It was a year, he thought, not only for growing forward, but sometimes for taking giant steps backward into time, with American Graffiti, the Greasy Fifties Dance, and the seventy-six trombones that led the big parade. It was a year when sophomores made spirit more than just a six letter word. A time when choruses chanted "Keep Your Head to the Sky" during Black History Week. It was a time for history and math and science and all those things someone has vowed "Thou shall know."

But most of all, it was a time for us. When nothing felt so warm as love and nothing hurt so much as love that wasn't there any more. It was a year of wins in track and wrestling and Girls' Basketball, but of disappointment for the Football and Basketball teams. It was a year when seniors from Fleming and those from Addison laughed and cried together at the last pep assembly. It was a year of growing tall and sometimes out and sometimes up. A year with room to grow.

'A year with room to grow...'

His love has many voices. It sends its greeting in words to a troubled student or jokes with a cheerful one outside Camper Hall. It speaks in warm bear hugs reserved for cherished moments with his own children. It stands quietly, serving the God he loves as a deacon in the church.

His love has many moods. Sometimes it is bold and laughing. Sometimes it is sober and relaxed. Always it is demanding, but always gentle, understanding.

His love comes in all seasons. It accepts summer's invitation to come out and sweat a little with the team. It rides through icy winds of the last football game in autumn. It wanders through drizzling track practices in the spring.

His love speaks in many places. It leans against cages filled with snakes and gerbils and white mice. It comes sniffing into a fieldhouse reeking with sweaty socks and liniment. It has surfaced selling donuts and raffling prizes and riding donkeys to make money for his Track Team.

His love of sports led him to letters in football, basketball, and track at Concord College. A back injury cut short a career in professional football—he once attended summer camp with the Oakland Raiders. But his love of sports and sportsmanship—and his—have spilled over to build a championship track program at William Fleming.

We have listened to his love. We have grown under its strength. And in return, we dedicate the 1974 Colonel, with love, to Coach Charles Robert Sandy.

At the Dedication Assembly, Jay Robert Sandy interrupts his father's appreciation speech.

Shading his eyes from the sun, Mr. Sandy explains the fundamentals of broad jumping.

It was the routine that got to him, the same day over and over, the same melody repeating itself in six periods, a thirty-minute lunch, five minutes to make it from class to class. And then, he remembered, he had seen a poster saying "Tryouts for The Music Men—Open to Everyone." From that point on, he grew.

After he had a part in the play, there was something to really look forward to: the rehearsals after supper—hustle as they were; or the "How's the play going?" from people he hardly knew; or the "Can you get me two tickets? I hear they're all sold out."

And it carried over in other ways, too. He was a little more respectful at assemblies now, because he knew how it felt to be at the mercy of an audience. And a little more confident—if he could make them laugh on stage, why not off? School didn't seem so filled with the sameness he once dreaded. He had been a part of something special. He had belonged. And that had made all the difference.

In The Music Men, Tony Andrews, Robbie Harp, Doug Jones, and David Henkel harmonize on "Ice cream, ice cream, ice cream."

Changes shook

sophomores and former Addison students on Orientation Day. On Monday, August 23, all students who attended school realized that they would need to adjust to many differences.

Eight o'clock each morning, cars began to roll in. When the assigned parking places granted to seniors and working students were filled, other student drivers parked on both sides of Ferncliff.

In January, President Nixon announced to the nation that Daylight Savings Time would go in affect year-round during the energy crisis. Students rose with the moon instead of the sun. In pitch black, students walked to the bus stop. When an elementary child was hit by a car in pre-dawn, school opening was delayed until 9:30 each morning. The dismissal bell did not ring until 4:45 for sophomores. Other changes included four lunch periods and a seven period day. A larger student body also necessitated split pep assemblies.

'Let's go cruising' was a common expression heard from Fleming students as the weekend approached. Some cruised Melrose while others cruised Williamson Road, driving through parking lots of restaurants and winding up at The hangout — McDonald's. Many cars were abandoned as students chose to ride around with someone else. When parents were cooperative, students found entertainment by throwing a party.

During the fall, football games drew enormous crowds. Basketball games and wrestling matches provided excuses for dates during the wintertime. Movies and hockey games also rated. A "Special Night" often meant a rock concert at the Civic Center, where Elton John, Liza Minnelli, Jethro Tull, and Bloodstone performed. After games, work, and concerts, weekend night owls continued to cruise, often to the WROV Late Show, making the night complete.

clubs and organizations invited, and throughout the year students responded to the call. The Booster Club initiated basketball season with a pancake supper before the first home game. Beta Club members ended the year at Western Sizzlin' Steak House. In April, Latin students celebrated the fall of Troy at the Latin Banquet. There, "Roman slaves" served up plates of chicken and ham to Gods and Goddesses from advanced Latin classes.

The French Club Cabaret featured "the best French food this side of Paris." Homebread played for dancing after the dinner of coq de vin and cherries jubilee. Students in C.O.E. and D.E.C.A. invited their employers to the Barn Dinner Theatre for an Appreciation Banquet in the spring. At the Choir Banquet at Bonanza Steak House, the Choir presented Mrs. June Perry with a silver bowl for 25 years of service. In the spring, picnics proved popular with The Music Man cast, the Newspaper staff, and the Spanish Club.

No visitors' pass was needed for the school's special guests, who provided a welcome distraction from routine classwork. Taking the speaker's platform in early fall, candidates for the Virginia State Legislature spoke to a contingency of eighteen-old-voters and urged those too young to cast a ballot themselves to prod their parents to the polls.

Karate and choral works combined as students from Lynchburg Baptist College whetted the audiences's taste for a good old-fashioned revival at Shenandoah Baptist Church. At the spring awards assembly, community leaders presented honors to those who had earned them.

Not only in the gym's bleachers, but also in the classroom, other speakers approached diverse subjects. Students in Journalism class heard Channel 7 newscaster Ted Powers and Roanoke Times Newspaper publisher Barton Morris discuss the social responsibilities of journalists.

Flanked by Channel 10 cameramen, another news reporter, Janet Bowles, interviewed D.E. coordinators T.J. Ross and Roger Lovern about surveys taken by D.E. students. In Contemporary Literature class, State Troopers and Dr. Charles Swecker discussed the penalties for and the dangers of using marijuana and other drugs.

In a less serious vein, the Red Heads, a female squad, challenged a male basketball team of faculty members to a battle of the sexes. The men lost 48 to 45.

As a visitor to the Journalism class, television personality Ted Powers discusses the journalists' position in society today.

than usual, Homecoming, danceless for the first time in recent history, called it quits. The Colonels' 44 to 6 Homecoming victory over Northside ended a week of spirit rousing activities. As the week began, clues to the identity of the "Secret Spirit Person" led students to look for a five dollar prize. Balloons and streamers decorated the gym as cheerleaders made their way into the pep assembly on tricycles. Cheers of "Sophomores are what? Red (hot if you were a sophomore neck if you were a junior or senior) stopped long enough to hear the announcement of Mr. Touchdown, Steve Stewart, and to introduce the Homecoming Royalty. For the first time, identity of queens (Dee Dee Hudgins and Sylvia Davis) remained a secret until they were crowned during half-time ceremonies. Minus a club sponsor for the traditional dance on Saturday night, Homecoming ended when the buzzer signaled the final score. Only the crepe paper from the cars decorated for the motorcade and a pile of confetti left for clean-up at Victory Stadium remained of Homecoming '74.

People griped

about having split pep assemblies, but everyone had to admit it. The gym, even half-full, saw more spirit than the Class of '73 would have thought possible even in its loudest moments. Almost once a week during the fall, Group Y stayed in class while Group X traveled to the gym. Inside, the students climbed up the brightly-colored bleachers. Once settled, they accompanied music from the Pep Band with whistles, horns, paper airplanes, and wild yelling. Then the moment came for competition cheers. Usually sophomores and seniors battled it out for position Number One. Almost always, seniors won. As the assembly closed, seniors strolled out first, followed by juniors and sophomores. Back in period two, students nursed sore throats and shook confetti tangled in their hair. Over the intercom, Mr. Beahm's voice called Group Y into action.

Blazers, platform shoes, and baggies bring Darlene Cleghorn and Glenn Dillard back to the scene with fashion.

Bending over water fountains and struggling across bleachers at pep assemblies presented problems for students clad in the "now" look. The culprits — short skirts and four-to-seven inch platform heels. Good old new jeans, bleached to look worn, continued to lead the fashion scene for both sexes. Mix-matched tops, large ball or loop earrings, bulky necklaces, and a rainbow of painted fingernails completed the outfit most popular with girls.

Hair styles ranged from very long to very short. A shag from Eddie's became the thing for some. Others plaited their hair into tight braids and braved freezing weather with knitted hats.

A thermostat lowered by emergency energy measures also took its toll on winter fashions. Long coats with warm fur collars, layer-upon-layer of sweater tops, and brightly-colored knit socks kept shivers to a minimum.

Junior Clifford Curtis finds that a knit hat is a great cover-up for his braided hair.

The snow that stole Christmas crept in late Sunday night, three days before vacation officially began. By Monday, the ground was frosted with a four-inch layer, and the roads were glazed solid with sheets of ice. The unexpected snow cancelled many of the school's contributions to the Christmas spirit.

Since baskets for a needy family remained unfilled, the S.C.A. donated only a few articles of clothing and food to the Salvation Army. Drama students rehearsed long hours for a play, but their greeting to the student body was never produced. The Concert Choir members heard over the radio that for the first time, no Christmas concert would be given. Half-way decorated classroom doors and windows stayed almost bare.

Only two events heralded Christmas at William Fleming. The Band and Choir performed Christmas music on the Friday before the snow. The P.T.S. A. sponsored a Christmas dance.

Meetings during class

boosted membership in most clubs, but activities during the first semester stayed at a minimum. A fall assembly saw two sets of S.C.A. officers, one representing Fleming and one Addison, installed. The S.C.A. also entertained the faculty at a tea.

Menus attracted the attention of many club members. The French Club's menu for Cabaret included chicken in wine sauce and cherries jubilee. After dinner, French Club members danced to the music of "Homebread". F.T.A. members treated their favorite teachers to a supper in Camp Hall G.E. room.

Money claimed attention of many clubs. The Red Cross collected pennies during lunch and homeroom for its goal

1 mile of pennies. Money matters held the girls' attention as the Spanish Club's Sadie Hawkins Day approached. Posters reminded students that they should join Sadie and go "greasy" with bobby socks, penny loafers, and greased-back hair, a la 1950's.

'One two three o'clock four o'clock rock" swiftly brought the sell-out crowd at the Sadie Hawkins dance back to the Greasy Fifties. With more than a little dab of Brylcreem and a few slashes of bright red lipstick, the crowd braved the drizzling weather in black leather jackets, moth-eaten letter sweaters, and mid-calf skirts. Ankle-high jeans, white bobby socks, and worn out saddle oxfords also ranked a slot on the hit parade of fashions for the night.

Inside the cafeteria, oldies but goodies, spun by Fleming's version of Wolfman Jack, ricocheted from the rafters. "Elbow room only" was the rule of the night, with couples crowding the dance-floor for the twist, the stroll, and the swim. For brief interludes, girls treated their dates to scoops of ice cream at the soda shop or a feature film (Laurel and Hardy) at the make-shift drive-in. And back by popular demand, Marryin' Sam did a booming business at the hitchin' post, making it official that "she intends to get hitched (whether he wants to or not.)" put it this way: I'll have to say I love you in a song." Choir Director June C. Perry said it fourth period everyday the same way - in a song

Discipline, Perry style, began to shape the voices of sophomores in Girls' Chorus, and continued by molding the voices of the 106 member Concert Choir into a nationally recognized choral group

Those voices echoed throughout the Roanoke Valley in a series of concerts. A fall concert at school, a Chorale presentation for Delta Kappa Gamma, and a Christmas Concert at Windsor Hills Methodist Church highlighted the first semester's work. As winter approached, the Choir and Girls' Chorus joined the Roanoke Valley Symphony Orchestra for Beethoven's Ninth Symphony

Spring featured The Music Man, a solo concert for the P.T.S.A., and a spring concert in the school cafeteria. Throughout it all, Director June C. Perry demanded perfection, and she usually got it. Making the Choir want to do the best they could was just her way of saying to the choir "I love you." And the Choir returned her love in a song claimed the attention of the sixty-four Band members and eight Sabrettes during a concert tour in the Washington D. C. area. Under new Band director Ulysses B. Broadnax, the band performed at General Smallwood Junior High School and La-Plata Senior High School in suburban Maryland before taking a three-hour sightseeing tour of the nation's capital.

Led by the Majorette and Sabrette squads, the Band performed half-time shows during football seasons, and the Pep Band continued with its renditions at basketball games and pep assemblies. District Band Festival competition found Band members playing their way to an excellent (3) rating. The Stage Band held a concert at Ruffner and Addison Junior High Schools and Northwest Elementary School. On April 23, the Concert Band welcomed spring with a concert at home.

led the big parade to the William Fleming Players spring production of The Music Man. For the first time in over thirty years, the Drama Department joined hands with both the Choir and Band to produce a full-scale Broadway Musical involving almost seventy-five people. Cast as Marian, the librarian, and Professor Harold Hill, Kathy Long and Glenn Brimmer led the cast to standing ovations at all three performances before sell-out audiences.

"Problems crept up all during the two months of rehearsals," conceded Mrs. Deborah Mayberry, director. "But the kids found a way to solve every one of them. The internal stage needed to be moved, so roller skates made it mobile. The eight-year-old (Hugh Dalton) cast as Winthrop Paroo had to learn to lisp, and Mrs. Paroo (Melinda Shepherd) had to sing in an Irish brogue, but they all came through when the curtain rose."

During the fall, the Playmakers premiered in The Rainmaker. Junior Beckner as Bill Starbuck and Juli Moore as Lizzie Curry debuted in Mrs. Mayberry's first effort to direct theatre of a basically serious nature. Roles in The Rainmaker, like The Music Man, were open to any would-be actor, not just to drama students.

pleaded editors, and their publications showed little resemblance to last year's. The yearbook adopted a new look with more use of natural color, a more professional-looking ad section, and a personal approach to the sports copy.

The Sabre staff lived through even more drastic change. They abandoned the newspaper format of yesteryear and captured the news magazine image of today. For the first time, newspaper photographers took and printed their own photographs. The news magazine included both more feature articles and sports coverage in addition to regular news items.

Another change from last year meant publication were sold as a package. The package cost $11.30.

were better than one as Co-S.C.A. presidents Glenn Brammer and Becky Leach joined forces in leading student government activities. The S.C.A. also suggested a test exemption policy, but the motion was later vetoed by the Principal's Advisory Committee.

In the fall, the S.C.A. honored the faculty with a tea in the library. It also boosted school spirit by bringing Colonel William Fleming back to life in the person of Curtis Fulcher, dressed for the role. Presiding over the "moonshine," Bime Overstreet and Candy Dieber serve Cokes at the Sadie Hawkins Dance reached epidemic proportions on Saturday night, April 20. The culprit: Sadie Hawkins Dance

Earlier in the evening, car motors roared as barefooted girls, dressed in bib overalls and Daisy Mae blouses, prepared to pick up their dates. Some guys made the girls move over, but most really enjoyed being chauffeured around. At the appropriate time, the girls pinned the corsages of fake flowers, grapes, and other fruits on the guys

A film of dust gathered in the air as couples started dancing to the songs blasting through the stereo amplifiers, and unforgettable hay fights dispersed dancers from the crowded floor at regular intervals. An occasional breath of fresh air or a journey to the "Moonshine Stand" for a Coke revived parched throats and polluted lungs

Eleven-thirty came soon as the couples, joined "forever" (or at least for the night), by Marryin' Sam, danced to an old favorite, "Color My World." The dance ended, but backs itchy from straw and eyes runny from straw dust kept memories of Sadie Hawkins alive for days to come.

Taking a breather, Laura Linton and Tim Jones listen to the music of the "Sound System."

Standing-room only described the dance floor in the gym turned-ballroom as the Junior Class entertained seniors with "A Time for Us" on May 18. Playing in front of a seascape flanked by Roman columns, the Royal Kings lured more than one hundred fifty couples to boogie from eight until mid night. As seniors and their escorts entered through an archway of white hearts, Junior Class President Junior Beckner announced each couple. During band breaks, prom-goers sampled punch and cake squares or stood in the never-ending line to have prom pictures taken. Cossages wilted in the ninety-degree weather as prom night '74 drew to a close amid raves from a grateful Senior Class.

Juniors Stanley Keatts and Brenda Euell help themselves to sheet cake and lime punch catered for the Junior Senior Prom.

Honor recipients discuss growth

To give an insight into their experiences at William Fleming High School, recipients of major honors were asked by the Colonel staff to answer the question "What experience at William Fleming High School has contributed most to your growth as an individual?" Their answers follow.

The most "growing" experience I had since I transferred last fall was the one that made me feel a part of this school. Early in March, I played a full length feature solo for the Band concert. I had worked long and hard preparing the solo, and I was especially excited about playing it at Fleming. In spite of my nervousness, the solo went well. What happened afterwards made all the work before hand worth while. For many days, people I didn't even know kept telling me how much they enjoyed my solo. Their appreciation really made me feel good about being here.

In my three years at William Fleming High School, no one particular experience has contributed to my growth, but a combination of things have been meaningful. More than anything else, I feel I have grown under the trust and respect of the teachers here. My teachers treated me as an individual and let me express myself as such.

Being cast as Professor Harold Hill in William Fleming's production of The Music Man meant more to me than any other experience in high school. It gave me a chance to express myself in both speech and song. The confidence I learned from being on stage and the closeness of the cast will always stand out in my mind as a meaningful opportunity for personal growth.

Glenn Brammer

Although I am grateful for many growing experiences - being in two musicals, singing in the Choir, traveling to New York City, Washington, Mexico, and Valle Crucis - editing the yearbook has definitely added most to my growth. I found out that having a position of leadership can often be lonely. But sharing hard work with people I have come to love has been a real blessing. I am leaving Room 409 and the Colonel to someone else, but I know I'll carry with me the growth it made possible and the special gifts of the people who understood.

I can not attribute my growth at William Fleming to any one experience, but rather to a combination of events during the past three years here. Having come in contact with students of totally different attitudes and concepts, I have broadened my idea of the world, and my ability to cope in it has expanded.

Perhaps more than any other organization, the S.C.A. and the Human Relations Council have a far-reaching impact for the students here at William Fleming.

I participated in both to try to help those who were indifferent and critical and make them realize how essential it was for them to express themselves.

Because I was specifically interested in the black students and other minorities, whom I felt were not properly represented, I supported a Minority Council to run parallel to the S.C.A.

My experience working with the computer that was here at Fleming for four weeks ranks among the top ten as far as my intellectual growth is concerned.

Programming the computer has helped me to think more logically. Since I plan to major in mathematics and continue to work with computers, I feel that my work here will help me next year in college.

Clay Deaver
(Outstanding Teenager of America)

The experience that contributed most to my growth at William Fleming was a non-school trip to Mexico the summer before my senior year. On that trip, I learned that a smile could be understood in any language.

That trip greatly changed my attitude towards the majority of countries in the world and especially toward the people who live in other less-fortunate cultures.

David Hendrick
(I Dare You Award)

My experience as Co-President of the S.C.A. at Fleming has contributed the most to my growth. Learning to deal with the responsibilities of the office, coping with the many frustrations which arose due to our unique situation, and realizing what little good can be accomplished without full support and team effort have all added much to my growth as a person. It has also increased my respect for efficient school organizations.

Becky Leach

Three years of playing Fleming sports have helped me grow both physically and mentally. Being on the team meant at least two hours after school almost every day, smelly, sweaty clothes, a lot of physical pain, lot of goals reached, and many mental letdowns as well as gains. It also meant coming to know and understand my opponents' thoughts and actions. I learned to take the losses with the wins, no matter how big or important the game. Most important of all, I learned that, in a physical contest as well as in life itself, nobody can win alone. Everyone has to be part of the team.

Count-down came—thirteen more days, ninety-one more hours, twenty-six more bus rides, thirteen more lunches. As seniors waited for the end, they found a calendar of events to bid them goodbye. In mid-May, honor graduates chomped on hamburgers, potato salad, and home-made apple pie a la mode at the traditional end of the year picnic. Later, girls packed away blue jeans and donned long dresses for the Senior Banquet, held at the Barn Dinner Theatre. After a buffet dinner of roast beef, chicken, and fish, seniors laughed through Love on a Rooftop, then danced to stereo tapes. A breakfast at Bailey's Cafeteria initiated Senior Day, and preceded a day of private parties. On Friday, 427 seniors soon-to-be graduates received their caps and gowns at the Capping Assembly. A Baccalaureate message from the Reverend John Sadler of Northminster Presbyterian Church brought seniors face to face with exams and left the countdown at four more days, twenty-eight more hours, eight more bus rides, four more school lunches.

At Baccalaureate the Reverend John Sadler speaks to graduating seniors.

to ruin graduation. Thunder barked as 127 graduates marched behind their deans and teachers to "Pomp and Circumstance." After the invocation by the Reverend R. R. Wilkinson, Senior Class members filed beside underclassmen to sing their final concert — "The Last Words of David" and "Hymn for Our Time." Senior Class President Diane Anderson welcomed some two thousand guests and introduced Dr. M. Dean Pack, Superintendent of Roanoke City Public Schools. The six class speakers included Terri Hodges, salutatorian, Catherine Deaver, Valedictorian, Peggy Hopkins, John Wright, Kim Suss and Jay Ash. Dean M. Dean, Frank W. Buehler, and John Edwards addressed the graduates. After the benediction, graduates were dismissed and marched back to their homes. The ceremony lasted minutes before the clouds opened and the rain fell.

This was the place that really brought it all back—the field house. He let the door slam shut gently behind him, walked along the yellow walls, and ran his hands across the vents in the steel gray lockers, making a slightly off-key racket, stopping in front of the next-to-last locker along the far side, twisting the lock as he had done so many times before. "It still works", he thought. It was empty now, except for the smell of sweat and liniment and loneliness that somehow lingered on. This had been where he had felt the safest—where it all made sense. He remembered the thud of his body taking a runner in the P.H. game. Even with pads, it had hurt, but it was a good hurt. And the way his hand throbbed a little when his bat connected with a long drive in the game against Cave Spring. It had hurt, but it was a good hurt. And the time he saw the coach slap his best friend in the face as he landed in a winning long jump. It had hurt, but he knew it was a good hurt.

He slammed the locker shut, jimmied the lock to be sure it was caught, and made his way outside. This room belonged to another team now, he knew. His locker would belong to someone else. He let the big orange doors slam shut. He remembered it all, and somehow, it hurt.

Running the 88's, Martin Boy breaks the record for the Cosmopolitan Track Meet at Reesake College.

The Junior Varsity and Varsity cheerleaders kept the school spirit alive during the homecoming season from September to November. They performed at the homecoming dance, the football games, and the basketball games. They also performed at the homecoming assembly and the homecoming parade. They were a big part of the homecoming celebration.

'We were beginning to feel like somebody' says Varsity Football Team

The 1973 Varsity Football Team finished the first half of the season in style, compiling a respectable 3-2 mark in its first five games. The team came from behind to beat Cave Spring, and put up a valiant fight against Halifax and Patrick Henry. Against Patrick Henry, which later went on to an undefeated season and the state AAA championship, Fleming scored fourteen points. The Patriots called the Colonels "the toughest team we've faced."

When the first of August came, a group of guys that were over any practice field. No one ranked our football team very high, but we thought the 1973 Colonels just might fool everybody. We were young, but talented.

By the time we started hitting in gear, we'd resigned ourselves to practices twice a day. The thing I'll remember most about those practices was hitting against the sled. You see, if we were all coming off the line at the same time, you could hear one big beautiful thud when we hit. We always had to hit, until we did it right — until Coach heard that thud.

There were other agilities I'll remember too. Like the racks. We had to run through a rack of ropes to learn how to keep our feet moving. And then there was the bear-crawl — when we had to move around on all fours to strengthen our fingertips. And I almost forgot (how could I?) those forty-yard sprints that left you feeling like your insides were spilling out.

We were really up for our first game, especially after that pep assembly — that really psyched us all out. I mean, I'm not emotional or anything, but I swear I got chill bumps when we ran through that goal post for the first game. We won that game against Jefferson and the next one as well. We beat Northside. We were really beginning to feel like somebody — a team to reckon with. At least we thought so then.

The truth really hurt as Colonels compile 3-7 record

The 1973 Colonel Varsity Football Team turned around completely and ended its season in a losing rut. Through the last five games, the Colonels could not find a game for its win column. A 28-0 loss to Franklin County paved the way for lickings from Martinsville, Thomas Dale, and Robert E. Lee.

Tom Brown, junior end, was selected to the All-Metro Football Honor Team. Eddie Ford, also a junior, was given honorable mention as a defensive back.

After we got our season underway, we settled down to a routine. On Saturday, we came to school and checked for injuries, usually had a light workout. Tuesday was offensive day, when the ends usually went with Coach Sandy to work on pass patterns, the line went with Coach LeNoir to work on blocking, and the backs stayed with Coach Lee to work on plays. Wednesday was defensive day, when we planned our strategy for the next game. Thursday was relatively light; we ran plays against the dummies, reviewed the week. And on Fridays, came the moment of truth.

For the next five games, the truth really hurt. It seemed like everything started to fall apart at once. We couldn't get a first down when we needed it . . . we couldn't score in the final seconds of a game to pull out an almost victory. Injuries and illness began to take their toll. Players quit. Some just couldn't tough it out; others didn't care; others had their own reasons, I guess. Those of us that stayed on felt real close by the end of the season. We stuck together when we got a lot of guff from a whole school of arm chair quarterbacks. Sometimes it was almost like the school thought we liked to lose. The truth is, those losses hurt. Deep down it was embarrassing. If you asked me to sum up the season, I'd have to say we lost a lot. What else can I say? Unless you'd been out there with us, you probably wouldn't really understand anyway.

'They'd have been real proud'

The Junior Varsity Football Squad closed a winning season with three wins, one loss, and one tie against J.V. competition and an additional loss to the Roanoke Catholic Varsity Team. Head Coach Jimmy Moore credited teamwork not individual performances, for most of the wins.

Once, only four fans showed up for our away game. Usually, just some parents and a few friends and the J.V. cheerleaders cheered us on. The Roanoke Times thought we rated a five sentence write-up after one win. Most of the time, we didn't even get that much attention. At times I wondered if anyone even knew we existed at all. Yet those of us who played J.V. football knew we existed, and I guess we'll never forget the season.

In some ways, it was a miracle that we did exist. Last year, the J.V. team was cancelled because there weren't enough players to compete. This year, we had thirty-five come out — the biggest J.V. team ever, I think. And we really played like a team.

What made me proud was that we never really got creamed. Even when we got beaten, we always gained yardage. It was mostly bad breaks — fumbles or something like that — that messed us up. But we always managed to move the ball.

I think everybody would have been real proud of us — if they'd only found out we existed.

It seems unfair, says Girls' Volleyball Team

The Girls Varsity Volleyball Team closed the season with a 2-6-0 record. Wins against Cave Spring and Botetourt highlighted the season, and a loss to Andrew Lewis was the team's worst disappointment. The Junior Varsity Volleyball Team chalked up four wins against two losses.

It seems unfair, but let's face it. If a guy is good in football or basketball, he's a hero around school. But if a girl's good, no one even notices. The girl who plays volleyball, or any other sport, seldom receives any recognition at all.

Those of us who went out for volleyball really loved the sport. Most of us had played in junior high, and maybe that was part of the problem at first. Some of us had been taught to set up the ball and others just slammed it. We learned different styles of play from different coaches, and when we put our differences together, it just wouldn't work. It took a lot of losses and unbelievable patience from Mrs. (Lynne) Ayers before we stopped blaming our mistakes on each other and started working as a team. At least, I'm glad we got it together in the end.

says Varsity Basketball Team

'It's rough to be ranked tops'

Rated in the pre-season polls as tops in Timesland, the 1974 Varsity Basketball Team started the season with a seven point win over Martinsville. After dropping two games to E.C. Glass and Lee of Staunton, the Colonels triumphed over Northside, then lost to Cave Spring by three points in the final seconds of the game. The team triumphed over Metro and district competition to take the Kris Kringle Klassic Tournament at the Roanoke Civic Center. In the tournament, the Colonels trounced Glenvar, whipped Andrew Lewis, and then edged their way to the championship with a two point win over Patrick Henry.

It's really rough to be ranked tops in Timesland before the season even starts. When you start out on top, everybody's gunning for you and you've got no place to go but down. That's where we went down. Nobody ever dreamed when practices started that we'd end up like we did.

If I were superstitious, I'd swear someone must have walked under a ladder or broken a mirror or seen a black cat cross his path. Our luck was that bad. First, we had more than our share of injuries. We lost two top men, Tom Brown and Bruce Bruffey, to injuries before the season got underway. Then Eddy Blankenship came down with bursitis.

We won our opener rather handily, then we lost two, won one and lost another one. We weren't playing like a championship team at all — until the Kris Kringle Klassic.

the Christmas tournament. For three nights, we got by with murder. We licked Glenvar with no trouble at all, stayed ahead of Andrew Lewis by six, and squeaked by Patrick Henry. Somehow, we seemed to be determined to take up the slack left by Brown and Bruffey's absence and to make do with what we had left. We won. It was like old times. It was a good feeling — a great one.

'Nobody would have believed it' admits disappointed Colonel Cagers

THEY DIDN'T BELIEVE IT LIVED. Meeting Andrew Lewis five nights after the Christmas tournament, the Colonels fell to the Wolfpack 31-24. The team had won 10 straight games over Franklin County, but this time the winning streak also met an early death. The next five games found Fleming in the losers column all five times.

An eight point win over Clay Spring broke the Colonels' losing streak, but preceded four more losses for the Colonels. The team finished regular season play with a 38-31 win over Jefferson.

In the first round of the Roanoke Valley District Tournament, the Colonels lost to Patrick Henry 61-58 in overtime. Junior James Clements was selected for the First All Roanoke Valley Team and also took All Metro honors.

I guess I feel worse for Coach Van Lear. He really worked us hard, but some of the guys just didn't like his style of ball-strategy ball. He taught us to set up the ball to look for the open shots. But some of the guys wanted to run and gun all the time. We just couldn't get together as a team.

Coach Van Lear had great hopes for us when the season started. He thought we'd go further than we did last year. I think we had the talent, and I know we're a much better team than our record shows. We didn't mean to, but I guess we really let Coach Van Lear, and ourselves, and everybody, down. Nobody would have ever believed the season would turn out like it did — except maybe the guy who walked under the ladder or broke the mirror or saw that darned black cat.

Right: Fleming's most brilliant play. Left: Fleming's most brilliant play.

'It's a whole new ball game,' says Junior Varsity Basketball Team

The Colonels Junior Varsity Basketball Team chalked up five losses against five wins. Fleming's victories included wins over E.C. Glass and a pair of wins against Franklin County Northside. Franklin County and Martinsville stole three wins from the Colonels by winning in the final seconds of the game.

For the Colonels, playing JV basketball was literally a whole new ball game. Most of us on the team had played in junior high, but about all we did then was grab and shoot and keep our fingers crossed just like in backyard ball. We knew much about setting traps or using patterns.

So our JV training period was a tough one. Coach Ingram was hard on basics — dribbling, shooting, and learning Fleming's offense and defense.

We didn't have a lot of depth. For one thing, most of us on the team had only one year of experience. We had a lot and no one but one player on the bench. But it was bad in another way — we just didn't have the depth it usually takes to win. Other teams had more players and they could substitute when they got tired. Since there were only five players on our team, we usually had to play the whole game. All our games were pretty close until the end.

At least we went out of state winning the first round. I don't think it was a fluke. We either won or lost. We were so close to winning the state championship. Ingram said it was too bad we didn't find the winning touch sooner.

One of the things I enjoyed the most was shooting. I was the best shooter on the team. I was the only one who could beat them. But in all fairness I'd have to admit we had an advantage. We played seven men against their five.

Wrestling Team

'It was worth starving'

During its regular season undefeated, the Wrestling Team claimed the 3-A Roanoke Valley District Title. After winning twelve straight matches, the Colonels lost at the District Meet, coming in third behind Cave Spring and Northside. Seven grapplers went to the Regional Tournament at Gar-Field High School. Chuck Cooke, Ivke Jones, Dan Brown, and Don Cannaday represented William Fleming at the State Tournament in Fairfax, Virginia. Dan Brown, who went undefeated during the regular season, was selected for the All-Metro

More than anything, wrestling taught me will power. The dieting a wrestler has to make Weight Watchers look like child's play. Sometimes, we had to live on celery and carrots. And if that didn't do the trick, we'd sit in the sauna for hours, or run around the field house in rubber sweat suits, or spit up everything of liquid left in our bodies. When we made weight, we feasted on orange juice and candy bars for enough quick energy to win a match. But after the match, we'd go back to starvation.

The key to wrestling is the coach. Coach Bryant has always taught them to us pretty well. Because we went undefeated during the regular season. We went into the Roanoke Valley District Tournament holding the title for 3-A schools in the area, but we came out hanging our heads a little. I mean it's embarrassing to let guys you've been whipping all season give the licks when they really count. It would be easy to make excuses for not winning the Tournament. It's hard to stay psyched up all season. And we had lost a lot of key players to injuries. It didn't seem fair when one of us was moved to another division, because he didn't make weight by a couple of ounces. But I'm not making excuses. We just lost that once. Otherwise, it was a great season. If it just hadn't been for that last minute choke.

'It's like an iceberg,' says Indoor Track Team

For me, there's something inside that wakes up when the starter's gun goes off, something that makes me want to run against others, and against myself. I really love running track.

One thing's for sure: track is sort of like an iceberg. Competing is the part of the iceberg everybody sees; training, the much larger part is hidden out of sight. For every yard you run in a meet, you've got to run hundreds to get ready.

The goal—that's the hard part. Like a lot of guys on the Track Team, I keep a little black book. Before the season, I think about my wildest dreams and write them down in that book. (I didn't aim high this year — just an Olympic Gold Medal.) Then, beside, I write down the least I wanted to accomplish by the end of the season.

Training started officially with Indoor Track season. There's not much glory to Indoor Track, but it helps get a guy in shape for the outdoor season. Coach (Bob) Sandy would take us almost every afternoon into Smith Hall for a workout. We couldn't really run far in the halls, so we worked on other things: coming out of the starting blocks, getting our steps down pat, working out in weighted vests.

Coach Sandy really instilled in us a lot of self-pride. Some of us had never really been good at anything before. Knowing we could do something well got us through those late afternoon practices and even brought us a fourth at the State Track Meet. We even had two state champions on the team: Robert Franklin won the 60-yard dash, and Tony Easley triple-jumped to first-place honors. But I think everyone was ready to move outdoors — to get on with the tip of the iceberg.

'We felt good about ourselves' admits Colonel Track Team

Claiming eleven wins and only two losses during the regular season, The Indoor Track Team took home fourth place honors at the State Track Meet. Two team members also returned to William Fleming as champions: Robert Franklin won first place in the state with his 60-yard dash, and Tony Easley placed first in the triple jump.

The Outdoor Track Team also fielded the best season in recent memory. Going undefeated during the regular season, the team capped the season with a third place finish in the state 3-A track meet. The Colonels were also champions of the Cosmopolitan meet and the Roanoke Relays.

Participating in only three meets the Girls' Track team placed second in a Tri-Meet with Cave Spring and Patrick Henry and lost to Patrick Henry by only eight points at another meet. Four girls qualified for the Roanoke Valley Sectionals in the 440-yard relays.

There was a big poster outside the cafeteria that listed all the school records, and every day when I'd pass by, I could almost see my name up there. Almost was as close as I ever got, but a lot of guys did break school records in outdoor track. Franklin tied his own record in the 100-yard dash, broke his own record in the 220. His time — 21.3 — put him in the top ten in the country. Tony Easley broke the school record in the long jump and triple jumped 49' 11 3/4" at the Regionals to claim one of the top five records in the country. Martin Seay broke the Cosmopolitan and District record in the 880 and came within 1/10 second of beating the school record as well. As a team, we had our best season in a long time. We went 9-0 during the regular season and came out third at both the Northwest Regional and State Meets.

I guess we all felt pretty good about ourselves after the season. Something good came out of every track meet. One guy might fall on his face, trip over his own feet, but somebody else would trim a few seconds off his record. And it was those few seconds we'd work for. Even one or two seconds would give us the strength to work off a few more. And the hope — however buried, however remote, remained that someday, like the others on the team, I, too, would make it to the top.

admits Girls' Tennis Team 'Maybe it's sour grapes'

Often called "the most improved Tennis Team in the Roanoke Valley", the Girls' Tennis Team split their season 2-2. The losses, both to Patrick Henry, were 4-3, with many of the individual matches being quite close. Teresa McLawhorn, a first year tennis player, went undefeated in regular season matches. Connie McGuigan won the Northwest Regional Tennis Tournament but was defeated in the second round of the Sectional Tournament.

The Boys' Tennis Team, coming from a season with no wins in 1973, scored one match in the winners column during regular season play. Many of the individual matches were also very close.

The trouble with most team sports is that they don't last long enough. I mean, it's hard to find sixteen other people on the spur of the moment to make up a basketball game, but you can always find somebody to bat around a tennis ball. I figure being on the tennis team and improving my game was a good investment, in that sense.

There were some fantastic moments on the court this year, especially for us girls. The thing we enjoyed the most was not really our wins, though we were glad to get them. It was giving Patrick Henry a run for their money. For years, nobody stood a chance against P.H. Maybe it's sour grapes, but it seems like all their tennis players started the game really young and got instruction from the pros. And many of them belong to tennis clubs where they can play year-round. But this year, we almost knocked them off their court. Even though we lost to P.H. both times we played them, those almost-wins sure felt good.

'If only high score won' Jarament's Golf Team Member

Young and inexperienced, the Golf Team won only four matches in Roanoke Valley competition. The four top-seeded golfers included two sophomores, one junior, and only one senior. Captain Mark Conners, one of the top five medalists in the Roanoke Valley District Tournament, qualified for the Regional Tournament and missed qualifying for the State Tournament by only four strokes.

Of all the sports you can name, golf has just got to be the most frustrating. It's frustrating for those who are playing it, but it's especially frustrating for those of us who are on the team, but don't qualify for the matches. You see, there are eight on a team, but only four can play during a match with no substitutions, like in most sports. You're either in the top four, or you're out altogether. If we didn't make the top four, we'd caddy or hunt up lost balls. I keep telling myself some day I'll get my turn on the tee. If high score won, I'd be there already.

'We battled against bruises' says Girls' Gymnastics Team

The Girls' Gymnastics Team participated in only two meets — the Roanoke City Meet and the District Meet. Stephanie Diamond competed in vaulting. Susie Hardie and Becky Nichols performed on the balance beam. Cindy Martin also vaulted, and Melody Hammond competed in both floor exercise and on the balance beam.

I well remember the time I came home from my first circus, an eight-year-old thrilled to death from seeing an acrobatic team for the first time. Monkey see—monkey do! I went right out in the back yard and got just far enough off the grass to plunge down in a heap, bruised all over. From the hard ground, I graduated to the soft bed. Then my father found out my tumbling had broken two slats, and when he finished with me, . . . more bruises. From my early adventures with tumbling, I made my first mistake as a beginning gymnast—plunging in without getting ready. Fortunately, that's a mistake our coach Mrs. Betty Hatcher, didn't let us make. When we weren't ready, we didn't compete.

It was really a mixed-up season for the Gymnastics Team. Since Fleming's gym was tied up with basketball practice, we had to go to Breckinridge to work out. Usually something was going on there. Once, we had to practice between the aisles of the Science Fair. But we did the best we could.

As far as medals, we never saw any except around other people's necks. But it didn't really matter that much. We were in gymnastics more for fun than anything else. And even if we don't have any medals to look back on, at least we'll have a few bruises to remind us of the season.

It was 'Home Sweet Home' for Varsity Baseball Team

Guided by Head Coach Shirley Stewart, new to the Colonel coaching staff, and Assistant Coach Jerome Campbell, the Baseball Team evened out the season with seven losses and seven wins. Their record claimed third place among Roanoke Valley District competition. Short-stop Jimmy Love, a sophomore, led the Roanoke Valley batting title with an average of .479.

Say it was "Home Sweet Home" for the Baseball Team. We won every time we played at home, and we lost every game we played away. I guess there was a psychological difference. We lost the first four games — all away; then, we played at home and won. So we sort of expected to lose when we went on the road — and we always did.

At home, we beat every team we played and gave all three teams tied for first place in the District (Franklin County, Patrick Henry and Cave Spring) unexpected lickings. The school seemed really excited about baseball. We had pretty good crowds at all the home games and they even introduced the team at a Pep Assembly.

No one really thought when we started practice in March — it was only two weeks before our opener — that we'd have a string of five wins at one point in the season. We started practice with a combined four wins under our belts from last year — three from Addison, one from Fleming. But things seemed to jell under Coach (Shirley) Stewart. He said he wouldn't give up on us until the last game — even if we went 0-14. He gave us a reason to win because we knew he really cared. I just wish for his sake — and ours — that we'd been as good away as we were at home.

Senior Randy Byrd drives home the winning run in the final inning of the season.

It was like getting two gold stars in a row. Or seeing his spelling paper tacked to the bulletin board for parents' night. Or being the last one standing for the weekly spelling bee. It felt good to be learning, he remembered. Sometimes, it hit him in the face—like watching Walter Cronkite on the C.B.S. News and knowing about Watergate from his history class. Or humming along with one of Bach's violas and realizing he kind of liked it. Or typing an application for a friend in no time flat. Sometimes, he was painfully aware of learning—rewriting a sentence for a Writing Lab theme (darned those dangly modifiers). Or coming back for help with logarithms. Or drawing a sketch for Mechanical Drawing over and over because the angles weren't quite right. It wasn't always easy, and it wasn't always fun. But he knew he was learning, and he kind of liked the feeling.

At a half-time show at Victory Stadium, majorette Cynthia Swanson and Band members perform a special routine.

Studying a student's absentee card, Mr. Hartwell Phillips, Dean of Coulter Hall, question a student's request to check out early

On Orientation Day, Mr. Thomas Dixon, Dean of Camper Hall, explains to students the basic rules at William Fleming.

Principal Frank W. Beahm, Jr., consults with Mr. D. Matt Robertson about guidelines for field trips.

As a group of seniors listen, Mr. Lloyd Austin, Dean of Hart Hall, explains procedures for mid-term graduates.

Smith Hall Dean Paul Foster searches in his file cabinet for a copy of Virginia's "Standards of Quality."

Six administrators enforce state's 'Standards of Quality'

You're at William Fleming six and one-half hours a day, five days a week, thirty-six weeks a year. It's our job to see that the time you spend with us runs smoothly. We administrators do a lot that most people don't even realize. We plan master schedules, propose curriculum studies, coordinate the programs within the school. We're on hand for every school event from 8:00 A.M. and some times until mid-night. We work out budget requests and try to stretch the taxpayer's money. Quite often, we have to smooth ruffled feathers.

This year, we've represented your school at conferences in Chicago, Dallas, and Richmond. We've also paid a lot of attention to Virginia's "Standards of Quality," new state legislature to insure better education. We're known for our yellow slips, but they're a small part of our job. We're here to help you, and we like to think that the harder we work, the better you'll work.

Or maybe you just don't get along with school. Let Mrs. Verlene C. Dillon, Home-School Counselor, help you solve your absentee problem before you reach the point of no return.

We're located throughout the campus in nine easy-to-reach offices. No appointment necessary. Just come in anytime and let us talk it over.

After all, people and their problems are our business — our only business.

Home-school counselor Mrs. Verlene C. Dillon checks on the reason for a student's chronic absence.

Girls enroll in 'male' courses; guys learn 'Bachelor Survival'

In 1954, Marianne Maybry tried to enroll in an Industrial Arts course. She was told to go back to her brownie pan. That same year, Bert Brownley wanted to learn to scramble eggs in a Home-Economics course. He was told to watch his mother at the stove, that Home-Ec was no place for boys. Twenty years later, at William Fleming High School, twenty "Mariannes" are enrolled in Industrial Arts courses. They learn furniture refinishing, home appliances, industrial crafts, and communication technology. In the Home-Ec room, thirty-one "Berts" learn far more than just how to scramble eggs. The classes teach not only bachelor survival skills, but also how to survive marriage and the family. Also, in the A.F.J.R.O.T.C. program, sixteen girls have joined the ranks with 110 male cadets. In addition to textbook materials, all cadets learn marching, flag courtesies, and customs of the service. The A.F.J.R.O.T.C. also visited Patrick Air Force Base in Cocoa Beach, Florida.

Before beginning an offset master to print some note pads, Connie Staples listens to Mr. E. G. Hollenbach's suggestions.

After completing a lesson in Family Planning, Roy Mitchell and Jack Wilson practice washing a toy doll.

In an Industrial Arts class, Gary McCormick and Rossyn Harvey assemble pieces of wood for candle holders.

Senior Harry Speese reviews for an Algebra II quiz.

Framed by models of atoms, Mr. Wallace Kern explains a chemistry equation on the blackboard.

Math, Science Departments initiate semester mini-courses

In the Math and Science Departments, we mean to make life easy for you. We give you a real choice. You can select from over thirty courses . . . courses with a future . . . courses with a challenge . . . courses with respect. When you sign up in the Math Department, your active duty will last either four and one-half months or nine months, depending on the course you choose.

But with opportunities like Banking and Finance, Math Appreciation, Probability, and Statistics, we're willing to bet you'll want to re-enlist over and over again.

Your term of service in science courses can be even shorter, with mini-courses changing every nine weeks. Then, of course, you can always further your career by taking advanced courses in Chemistry, Physics, and Advanced Biology.

In the Math and Science Departments, we'll teach you everything you need to know and make you glad you're learning it. Give us a try. Let us prove it.

Vocational education doesn't cost;
it pays.

D.E., I.C.T., C.O.E. combine to provide on-the-job training

Let us help you earn while you learn. Our Vocational Education Department offers three distinctive opportunities for you to get on-the-job training under competent supervision. The I.C.T. (Industrial Cooperative Training) program gives you a chance to explore areas of trade, industry, or health. D.E. (Distributive Education) can give you experience in an established retail store. C.O.E. (Cooperative Office Education) lets you learn the realities of office work during your afternoon hours.

Afraid you just can't make it in the business world? We aim to prove you can. We'll help you . . . with core classes in typing, stenography, book keeping, retailing, and technical matters you'll need in your job. We'll help you find a good job, gain job experience, and assure you of prompt employment and better wages after high school graduation. Virginia is for lovers.

Have an affair with Humanities!

English, Social Studies, Languages provide variety of courses

Conquer the questions of the Constitution. Bridge the communication gap. Gorge yourself on grammar and literature. Enroll in one of our humanities courses and discover a new love.

Combine sophomores, juniors, and seniors in one English classroom to form the nucleus of the English program. We have semester courses for the college-bound student and his non-college-bound friend. Whatever your needs, we want to meet them.

Interested in urban studies? American foreign policy? Economics? Sign up for our Social Studies courses. Discussions, newspaper assignments, film strips, field trips, and research projects are only the beginning of your learning experience.

Or if you find yourself faced with a communication gap or interest in other cultures, do not despair. We have a cure. Take doses of French, German, Latin, or Spanish. If you read and follow all directions carefully, you'll find yourself almost fluent at the end of the four-year sequence.

Mix English, social studies, and foreign languages and you have the ingredients for an exciting year. Remember, like the slogan says, Virginia is for lovers. Have an affair with humanities!

Behind-the-scene workers meet needs of student body

Stop and think about it. A lot of people work behind the scenes to make your life at William Fleming more pleasant. Where would you be without hot lunches? library books? clean classrooms? up-to-date transcripts? A staff of fourteen cafeteria workers prepare and serve Type A lunches for 10¢ and a la carte items even cheaper than McDonald's. Four professional librarians, important members of the William Fleming faculty, make the library a mecca for information seekers. They also coordinate audio-visual equipment and keep the library colorful with periodic art shows. A staff of custodians and maids work day and night to keep campus maintenance up to par. Para-professionals also assist the faculty in several capacities. Five secretaries spend the day working for you in many ways—marking attendance, typing letters, issuing work permits, keeping your records up-to-date.

Appreciate these behind-the-scene workers. They work for you. Each one in his own way serves up giant scoops of tender lovin' care.

Drama, Music students provide theater, concerts

If you've got the talent it takes, we want the chance to develop it. Let William Fleming's Music and Drama Departments introduce you to the smell of greasepaint and the roar of the crowds

Help make the music that ricochets around room 514 each day. Daily rehearsals prepare the Choir and Girls' Chorus for a calendar of concerts. In addition to singing for the school, the Choir sang for Delta Kappa Gamma, Windsor Hills Methodist Church, and the Roanoke Valley Symphony's presentation of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony." Choir members also joined the cast of The Music Man

Practice also became a way of life for the Band. Warm-up scales and sectional work preceded after-school rehearsals for football and basketball games, spring concerts, and Festival competition at Blacksburg, Virginia

If your talent feels more comfortable in a theatre than in a concert hall, try Play Production class on for size. The class studies stage craft, lighting, and directing before confronting a live audience. The Playmakers' repertoire included The Rainmaker and The Music Man

If you don't mind countless hours of practice before the show goes on, think about joining one of Fleming's Performing Arts groups. But we're warning you. There's more to performances than meets the eye

Long Distance ...
The next best thing to being there!

Vocational students travel to Jefferson High, Addison

The future is sooner than you think. Prepare for it today with occupational extension courses. Three times each day, a bus transports you free of charge to and from William Fleming to your training grounds for the future—modern, well-equipped vocational laboratories at Addison and Jefferson High Schools.

Take classes designed to give you new skills and a chance for a better job after graduation. Select from Auto Mechanics, Drafting, and Electronics. Explore Data Processing, Welding, and Food and Clothing Services. Reap profits from training in Printing, Machine Tool Operation, and Heating and Air Conditioning. Become skilled in Cabinet-making, Carpentry, and Masonry. Or prepare for a career in Cosmetology or Licensed Practical Nursing. Once you finish your course, we'll help you find a well-paying job.

It may take you a little longer to get to where we are, but we'd like to bet you'll think it's worth it once you make the trip. A daily bus ride is a small price to pay for a secure future. And after all, long distance is the next best thing to being there at William Fleming.

In Cosmetology class, Mrs. Dorothy Poff helps Joann Harman style Heren Dallas' hair.

Building an outdoor fireplace, Bernard Vaughn finishes a project in Masonry class.

Using a Stat King machine, Mark Buswell completes a photographic enlargement for his Printing class

Occupational extension students file off the bus to attend classes at Addison

Checking the gap for spark plugs, Mike Mansple works on an assignment for his Auto Mechanics Class

At an extension course at Jefferson High School, Ricky Camden practices welding procedures

They're the friendly Pepper-uppers!

Students relieve tensions in Art, Physical Education

Mind tired? Sick of book work? Trade in your text books and relax awhile. William Fleming's Physical Education and Art Departments offer an answer.

The Physical Education Department gives the perfect opportunity to make new friends like fencing and drivers education. But keep the old ones like volleyball and golf. Take a break from the locker room with Health or Drivers' Education. Behind the wheel of a 1974 Chevrolet, you will find all you need for a driver's license, and you can lower your insurance rates as well. In the Art Department, seniors who have never studied art before can get their hands coated with clay, paint, and glue. A new crafts class lets you find talent you never dreamed you had.

So relax a little. Give yourself a break with William Fleming's Art and Physical Education Departments. They're the friendly Pepper-uppers!

In the simulator, Sharlene Sherman watches the film 'Good Times'

Sophomore Jeff Allen molds clay or

of a room using his craft skills.

He flipped through a thick stack of pictures in his wallet, and wondered if the faces that smiled back had ever felt like he had; if they, too, had felt the pressures of growing up. He had become tired of trying to act like a lot of people he wasn't. His parents wanted him to be a leader, like his cousin, the class president. His teachers said he should buckle down and try for William and Mary or U.Va. The guys he hung around with expected him to walk and talk and act and dress and think and drink like them. Even the freaks and egg-heads wanted him to conform to their non-conformity. He had ached for someone who would not have him any different from the way he really wanted to be. And when that person came along, he knew the meaning of the word friend.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

What can be said about a Senior Class? That it saw the best of times and the worst of times seems trite but true. As sophomores, the Class of 1974 was welcomed with a "mini-riot". As juniors, it stood up under rumors that the apathy would lead to the death of the Junior-Senior Prom. Somehow pulled through with the much-used "Precious and Few." In 1973-74, seniors left for lunch five minutes early, had seats reserved at senior tables and got first choice for parking lot spaces. Senior Class President Diane Anderson led soon-to-be graduates through a spring of senior activities while head sponsor Mrs. Lendy Jamerson, assisted

Junior class sells chocolate, claims prizes, produces Prom

It was a chocolate and crepe paper year for the Junior Class. Lured by an array of ten prizes including a color television set, a ten-speed bicycle, a stereo set, and a clock radio, the juniors sold over $5,000 of Betsy Ross chocolate bars, mints, and caramel candy. Donna Wright sold over $300 to claim the television set, and Sue Roland chose the bicycle as second prize.

With more than enough money banked, the Junior Class continued preparations for "A Time for Us." On May 18, couples dressed for the Prom could hardly recognize the gym as the place where they had spent hours doing push-ups and jumping jacks.

Sophomores invade gymnasium with posters, confetti, spirit

Nobody really noticed the Sophomore Class much — until the first pep assembly rolled around. Week after week, the sophomores rallied together with posters, banners, confetti, and shouts of "Sophomores are what? Red hot!"

Not only in pep assemblies, but in all facets of campus life, tenth graders took their places. The Junior Varsity cheerleaders supported a winning football team and a steadily-improving basketball squad. Sophomore girls joined the Sabrettes for half-time performances.

For the first time, sophomores and seniors sat side by side in English classes. The English offerings, once somewhat segregated by grade levels, were open to all interested students, regardless of class.

Faculty members earn honors during their high school days

When high school students were younger, the thought that teachers were really human never crossed their minds. Teachers sat on one side of the desk, students on the other. Now most students see teachers not as the enemy at all, but as people, just like themselves, only a little older and taller.

The faculty members nobody "knows" at William Fleming High School racked up an impressive list of honors during their high school days. Seven were former William Fleming students themselves. Eighteen lettered in a varsity sport. Five cheered for their high school, one was elected S.C.A. President. The Homecoming Court claimed four teachers. Twelve held honors as valedictorian or salutatorian, and twenty-three served as news paper or annual editors. The faculty also includes twenty-seven former club presidents.

There were some places he just sort of grew up knowing about. Like chomping Cheezy Westerns at the Texas Tavern (where they serve 1,000-16 at a time.) Or buying jeans at the Army-Navy Store (where you change behind the counter and hope no one is looking). Or dodging your way through the crowds at the City Market (where they serve the world's finest hotdog at the Roanoke Wiener Stand). Or putting in your order at McDonald's (where you can give the man a dollar for a hamburger, french fries, and a small Pepsi—and still get back six cents).

And there were some places he had met from ads, like the Burger King (where you could clip the coupon from the Seabro and come out sixty-five cents ahead). Or Mr. Formal Wear (where you could rent a tux and win a chance to have a chauffeur-driven car for the Prom). Or the 7/11 Stores (where they sell razors and after-shave and even panty hose for Samath geddlies during the Sunday afternoon ball games). Places, like people, had become an important part of his year.

Featuring "1,000-16 at a time," the Texas Tavern invites chili lovers for a bowl with of a man crossing the desert by camel at night. Out of the darkness came a voice commanding him to dismount and fill his pockets with pebbles. When he had obeyed and remounted, the voice declared, "Tomorrow at sun-up, you will be both glad and sorry."

When dawn came, he reached into his pockets and discovered not pebbles, but diamonds. Then he was both glad and sorry glad he had taken as much as he had; sorry he had not taken more!

I guess feeling like I had three brothers and eleven sisters was the next-best thing to being born a Walton. At times, I worried, I fussed, I doubted we'd ever really finish the 1974 Colonel, but mostly I just felt good and warm inside about being a part of something special. And so, as I check the last line of copy on the last page, I stare out over the mountains around me and say with a grateful heart: good night, Lynne; good night, Donna; good night, Nancy; good night, Timmy; good night, Billy; good night, Mary K.; Becky, Dolores, Linda, Donna, Becky, John, Miss Stone. Good night, Miss P.

God bless us, every one.

ZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZ

It was like finding out there was no Santa Claus, or the form inside the Easter Bunny was just a man after all, or the good fairy didn't really go around leaving dimes under pillows at night. It was a year of surprises like that. A year when Addison transfers found out how good it felt to be accepted, and Calene realized how good it felt to have them around.

It was a year when Billie Jean King took $108,800 for proving to Bobby Riggs that women aren't always the weaker sex. A year when the Redskins never made it to the Superbowl and the Oakland A's took their second World Series in a row.

It was a year when records were being broken. When Hank Aaron hit homerun number 715 to break the Babe's record. When O.J. Simpson gained 2,036 yards to shatter N.F.L. rushing records. When Ivory Guehett ran the 100-yard dash in nine seconds flat to become the fastest man in the world.

It was a time for Thursday night dates with the Waltons, snowball fights for the winter, streaking in the spring. It was a year when Patricia Hearst spent her twentieth birthday with the S.L.A.

A year when Kim Selis told it like it was at graduation. When kids at Valle Crucis found out Mr. Boehm played a good game of volleyball and sang the best tenor this side of Ireland; they felt a little sad to hear he was leaving the round house to someone else.

It was a year when Barbara Streisand seemed to say it best when she sang "It is the laughter that we'll remember when we remember the way we were."

that we'll

Page 199, Top left: At the Shrine Bowl game, Dawn Cannaday poses with a passing clown. Top right: With a bag over his head, an April Fool's prankster disappoints a crowd of would-be streaker-watchers. Bottom: At the Homecoming Game, Curtis Fulcher brings Colonel William Fleming back to life.

He could remember when birthdays used to come around, and Ma-ma would spank, ever so gently, one-two-three-four, and then, a little harder, one to grow on. Those "ones to grow on" had gotten him this far, and now, too big for birthday spankings, he sat there swinging. For a long, long time, he had had two jobs: one was just being a boy; the other was growing up to be a man. In spite of those times when the world had gotten him down, and he felt rotten and mad at everybody, and even too tired to pray, he had been sheltered . . . sheltered, at least in spurts, by faith and loving-ness, by people who gave him room to grow. And it had hit him that night . . . that the hardest part of growing, like loving, is letting go.

He pulled himself up by the ropes, gave the swing a little push, and walked down the path to the place he called home. Just once, he looked back at the tree that had given him shelter and childhood joy so often. In the breeze of the warm summer night, the swing was still swaying.

'The hardest part is letting go.'
